Why this kills the due diligence headache.

Investors waste months second-guessing founders. Are they real? Is the traction legit? Can this team actually build? Apparent answers all of that before the first call.

THE OLD WAY

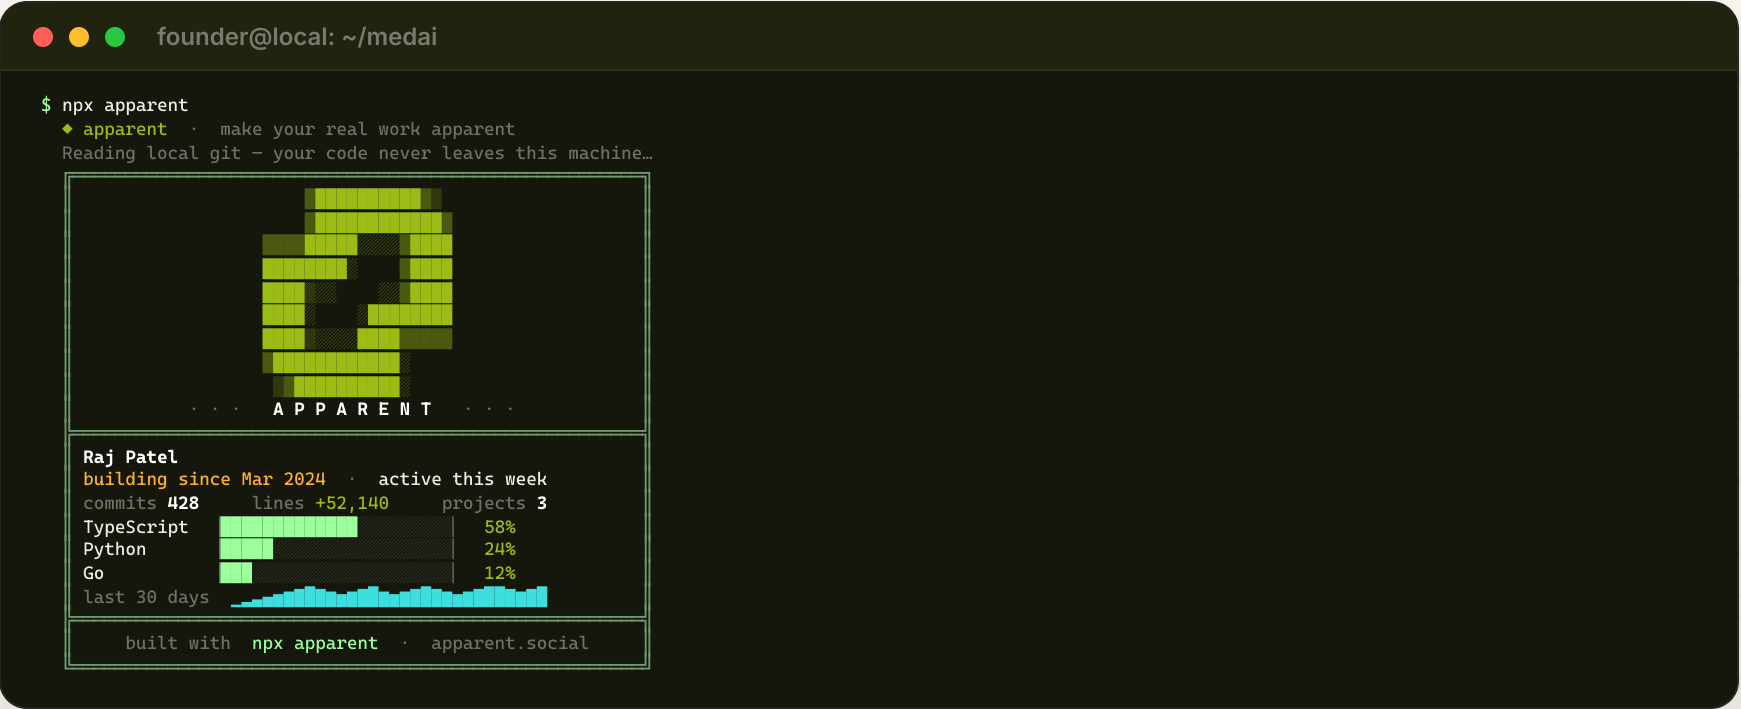

Weeks of work per startup. Most don't pan out.

WITH APPARENT

Due diligence in minutes. Fund with confidence.
No more second-guessing the founders or the team.

One command reads your local git, renders this verified build card, and shows exactly what reaches your Apparent profile. Your source code never leaves the machine.

Browse. Verify. Invest.

Billions spent finding startups. Zero spent verifying them.

40,000+

institutional investors globally: venture firms, angels, family offices. All actively looking for their next deal.

$12B / year

spent on tools to find and track startups: PitchBook, Crunchbase, Affinity, and dozens of CRMs.

None of them verify founders.

Every tool lists what founders claim. Nobody checks if it's real. That's the gap we fill.

They pay to reach the founders — search, filter, get matched.

This subscription is how Apparent makes money.

More founders → richer index → investors pay more

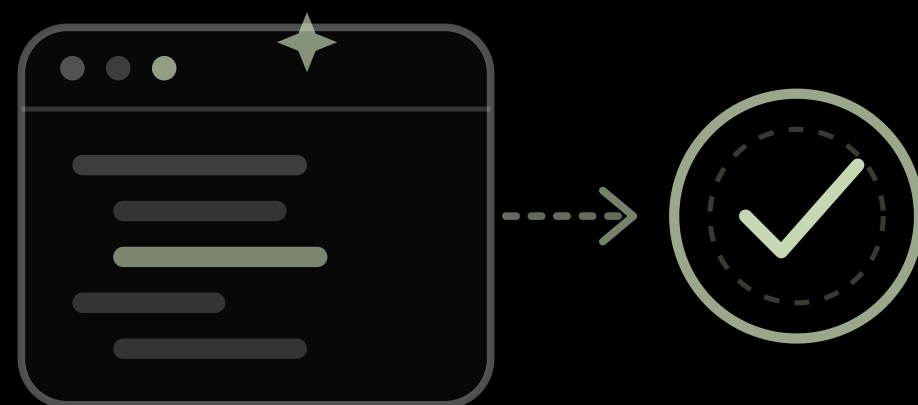

Free supply compounds the value of a paid product.

Three shifts made this possible.

01

AI can verify work

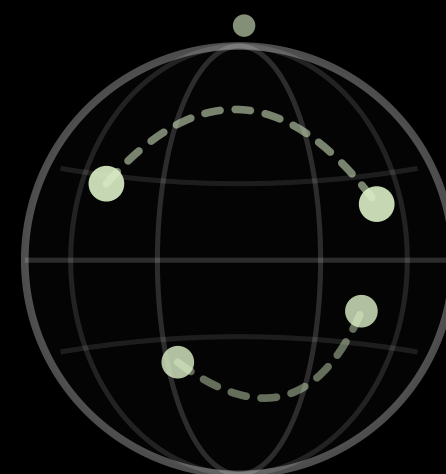

Agents read a startup's code, traction, and product history, then reason about investor fit at global scale.

02

Capital is going global

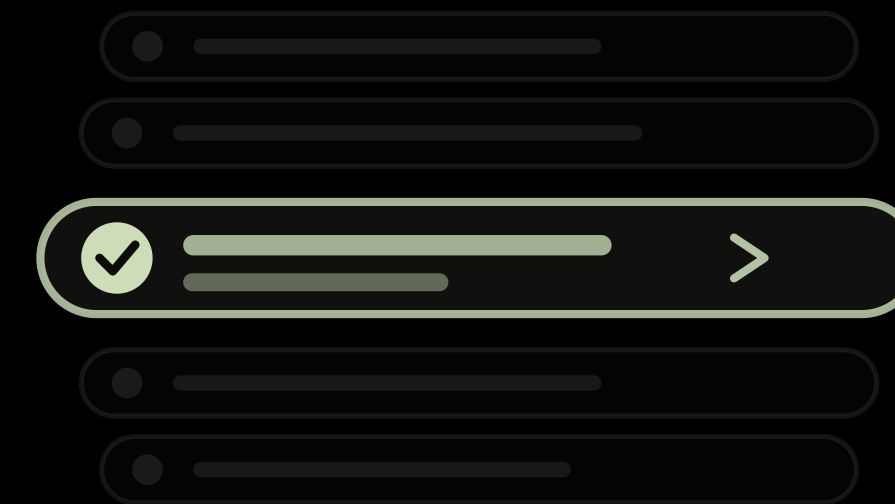

Cross-border investing is surging, but sourcing is still local and relationship-gated.

03

Cold outreach is dead

Inboxes are flooded with AI pitches. Verified proof of real work is the only signal that cuts through.

Proof of work is the new warm intro.
